John Binks

In this role, Binks will lead strategic engagement with federal systems integrators, driving new business development, expanding and executing partner relationships. He will work across partner alliances, delivery teams, and executive leadership to align innovative technology solutions with evolving federal national security mission requirements.

Binks brings extensive experience across government and industry. At Titan Technologies, he led business development and capture efforts focused on federal IT modernization and digital transformation. During his career at DHS/FEMA, he led initiatives supporting national disaster operations, including development of systems enabling rapid decision-making for the White House and National Security Council.

In addition to his executive role(s), Binks is a best-selling author and speaker focused on artificial intelligence, leadership, and digital transformation. His Bots & Bosses series simplifies complex technology topics for a broad audience, and his podcast and blog continue to reach a growing global following.

About Vibrint

Vibrint delivers mission-focused technology solutions to the national security and federal markets. The company specializes in high-performance computing (HPC), software engineering, systems integration, DevSecOps, cloud, AI/ML, cybersecurity, and advanced analytics, enabling customers to make faster, more informed decisions in complex operational environments.

About John Binks

John Binks is a technologist, author, and business executive recognized for advancing AI-driven innovation in the public sector. As the Federal Systems Integrator (FSI) Global Account Executive at Vibrint, he leads growth and partnership strategies across the FSI ecosystem, aligning emerging technologies with mission outcomes.
